A final cut in ladies' summer suits.

The encroachment of the builders on our selling space and the thoughts of what is yet to come, make us desperate==spurs us to des= perate selling. Hundreds of ladies' linen, striped linen, pure linen crash, and silk fig-ured linen crash suits will have to be moved this week and so we have to take heroic measures to move them. This immense lot will be placed on sale Monday morning on the second floor and you make take your choice for $1.98, though they sold for $6 & $7.

The lot comprises plain suits, elaborately braided suits and suits which are trimmed with strips of plain white India linon. Some are trimmed with all-over braid in the fanciest effects; they are all the highest grade, the most stylish summer suits which have been turned out this season, and as we stated above, they sold for $6 and $7.

It is by far the best offering of the season, for this reason. On every single suit we lose money, and there is not another house in town which has the nerve to make an offering under

ECHOES OF THE LONDON SEASON How Two Little Cuff Buttons Met

in Washington.

There are plenty of men and to spare at Newport, notwithstanding the absence of some of the shining lights, who have gone to the war. The whirl of events in which the Count of Turin was the conspicuous figure the past ten days brought them all to the front. Thursday the count refused all social invitations, as he had some special sightseeing on hand, but was ready again for the fun yesterday and for the rest of his stay, which concludes by Wednesday next. As the end of the month approaches the usual program of dinners and dances settles down to everyday regularity, although the conspicuous entertain ments will not begin until next month, by long-established custom.

The cabinet familles in town are getting pretty well acquainted with the stay-at-home fraternity and have little idle time on their hands. Secretary and Mrs. Gage, who are comfortably installed in the New-lands house at Chevy Chase for the sum-mer, greatly enjoy the cool evenings there. when they are seldom alone. One evening of the present week the President and cab-inet took dinner with Secretary Gage.

 The bells and dinners of the present London season have been great crushes of swelldom, but more thoroughly up to date in novel ideas and beautiful arrangements. A great many of the more noted entertainments were preceded by concerts, at which great artists either sang or played. One evening, when Lady Rothschilds was hos-tess at a large musicale, a dinner preceded, and the guests went later to Lady Ivengh's

> At Lady Portman's ball her gardens were illuminated, and all the guests enjoyed strolling about in the fresh air between the dances. The consideration of the hostess dances. The consideration of the hostess for her guests was such that she had a great pile of knitted shawis near the garden gate for those who willed to protect themselves against possible colds. Those who have not splendid establisaments have managed to entertain very handsomely all through the season at favorite restaurants, and for one concert in particular the guests were grouped on verandas overlooking the Thames. Nordica sang for the delectation were grouped on verandas overlooking the Thames. Nordica sang for the delectation of this company, and the event was a tremendous success. The youthful Duchess of Marlborough has been distinguished all the season by her splendid gowns, but the absence of jewels. At a dinner party at Londonderry House she wore her diamond that and the Vanderbilt pearls, which always create a sensation. There is a new hint for wedding arrangements in the coming marriage of an English girl and a Russian. There are to be eight or ten little girl bridesmalds, and their costumes are to be topped off with Russian headdresses and bouquets tied with the Russian colors. The Prinde of Wales was booked for a very lively part in the remaining festivities of the season, but his injured knee has cut short his participation in any more gayety at present.

any more gayety at present. The opening day of the Eton and Harrow cricket match was gorgeous in point of weather. Light dresses were possible in the warm sunshine, and the gathering was one of the very prettiest England can show. Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, as Miss Endicott, was rather too reserved in manner to indicate the success which she has attained in her husband's country. She is pointed out again and again as the most popular American woman in England, just as her husband was certainly the most popular Englishman who ever came to the United States. He is still identified with his well-known fad of orchid raising, which flower adorned his buttonhole the after noon he was married at St. John's Church. Mrs. Chamberlain's visits to this country have grown farther apart of late years, but Americans who figure to any degree in the London season see her everywhere. Mrs. Stanford, widow of Senator Stanford of California, contributed a valua-ble object lesson to rich people the world over the other day when she asked the San Francisco courts to reduce the income allowed her from her late husband's esanowed her from her late husband's estate. When the senator died Mrs. Stanford was allowed $10,000 a month to maintain her household in the manner to which she had been accustomed, but from time to time she has had this amount reduced until last week she petitioned the court to make her allowance $1,000 a month in-stead of the $2,500 which she has received the past two years.

The San Francisco papers call her peti-tion a novelty, but make the explanation that Mrs. Stanford is so anxious to see all the provisions of her husband's will carried out in her lifetime that she has willingly given up her large income that it may be applied to other uses in the es-tate. This is rendered much easier to her by the fact that she has been gradually cutting down her personal expenses, and lessening the magnificence with which the senator loved to surround her, and feels that she gains rather than loses by more simple ways of living. The two-million-and-a-half legacy to the Leland Stanford, Junior, University has been paid as well as a larger sum to other beneficiaries by the senator's will, so that within a comparatively short time his widow need feel paratively short time his widow need feel no further anxiety about his wishes in the disposition of his vast estate, for it will all have been distributed precisely as they planned between them, and as far as possible in the way they arranged when the instrument was written. Stanford heirs, however, are just like others who inherit large slices of great wealth. Several of them have voluntarily refused to accept them have voluntarily refused to accept their share, and have presented it to the Stanford University; others are willing to await the final distribution rather than embarrass Mrs. Stanford in any way, while others again desired cash payment. Judge Hunt in granting the request for Judge Hunt in granting the request for the reduction of income said it was a nevel experience, but that his confidence in Mrs. Stanford's judgment was such it gave him pleasure to sign the order.

Mrs. Stanford keeps several of her Cali-fornia homes open, but they are not conforms homes open, but they are not conducted by the retinues of servants nor in the elaborate style they were in her husband's limetime. She makes use of her Nob Hill mansion in San Francisco when she is in that city, but it is very seldom she enter-tains there or gives it any of its former life. Most of her time is spent at her place, Palo Alto, at Menlo Park, which is near the Leland Stanford, Junior, Univer-sity, and which will, after her death, be-long to it.

long to it.

Mrs. Stanford can make what use she pleases of any of these homes. The Palo Alto house is where her husband died, and the one from which their son started happy and well with his parents on his last European journey, and near which his remains rested until they were placed by the side of his father in the great markle tomb side of his father in the great marble tomb the latter had erected. The house is full of memories of the boy, on whom such love was lavished and upon whom such hopes were built. His whip still hangs where he left it in the hall, and on the front lawn are the miniature track and the engine and train of cars which were his favorite amusement.

A lady prominently identified with the administration families, and one of the brightest and prettiest of the young matrons from the west, was visiting the other day a friend who is a native Washingtonian. The visitor gave a little start when day a friend who is a native Washingtonian. The visitor gave a little start when she noticed a small gold breastpin worn by her hostess. It was of a style that must have been very popular in its day, since one often sees it in old-fashioned plctures. The back was about as big as a five-cent piece and on the face was a hand holding a tiny pearl. "Why," said she, "I have a little pin just like this, but mine was a cuff button till I had the pin put on." "Well, replied her hostess, "mine is a converted cuff button also. I have had it since the first winter I was in society. Lieut. Blank gave it to me. He kept the other and—well, there was a lot of sentiment to me whenever I looked at that button for a long time after. I remember he said when he returned from that cruise he would want the hand again, and both of us felt sure my hand and heart would go with the little gold one. I was married abortly after that, but if was only a few years ago, while runnaging through the cubby holes in my desk, I found the button and put it to its present practical use. But come to think of it, how did you get your button?"

"Well, to tell the truth, Lieut. Blank gave it to me in Hong Kong one night. You know mother and my sisters did the world round once and I went with them. We met Lieut. Blank at several ports, and how met Lieut, Blank at several ports, and how devoted he was!"

Then it was the other lady's turn to laugh, and she did. The last fifteen minutes of the visit were given up to laudatory descriptions of their respective husbands—the pleasure they take in staying home evenings and the personal sacrifices both are capable of when it comes to giving their devoted wives anything they may fancy.

The credit of the affair is due to Miss Jeanette Robertson, who worked hard to make it a success. Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 23, 1898. "Founder" Bradley is making his annual ttack on the young folks who put on their bathing suits at their cottages and then walk through the streets and on the plank promenade to the beach. The "founder" makes an annual attack on this class of summerites, as he does on the beer-ark venders. There is no statute prohibiting a person from parading the streets in a bathing suit, but it is probable that the senator will do his best to get an ordinance passed. The National Summer School of Music.

which is holding its eastern session at the High School building, is being very largely attended. The faculty includes some of the best-known lecturers upon music in this country. Among them are Prof. Louis C. Elson of the Boston Conservatory of Music, Prcf. James M. McLaughlin, music supervisor of the public schools of Boston; Prof. F. W. Archibald of Boston and Prof. T. L. Miss Grace Miller of Baltimore, William Flint of Galveston, Tex., and Frank Hoyt of Brooklyn attracted a good deal of atention to themselves and raised consider able excitement this week by breaking the Asbury Park swimming record. They heard Asbury Park swimming record. They heard that Senator Bradley was going to have a long-distance swimming match in August, and so they made up their minds to practice a little for it. They went into the water at 4th avenue, swam about a quarter of a mile out to sea and then turned south toward Ocean Grove. They came ashore at Ross' pavilion, three-quarters of a mile from the starting point. Their progress was watched by thousands of people on the board walk. board walk.

The bicycle enthusiasts at the Hotel Frunswick have reorganized the Brunswick "Bike" Club, which for a half dozen years has been the largest bicycle club among the hotels. Capt. Benjamin Ferrier of Jersey City has been re-elected, and Mr. Will Dean, master of ceremonies at the Brunswick, is guide; Mr. George Brandon is bugler, and the "boss biker" is Mrs. C. B. Woods. A series of evering runs has been begun to the resorts up and down the The bicycle meet which is to be held here at the Athletic Grounds next Tuesday will be the most important series of bleyele races that has taken place in eastern New Jersey since the national meet occurred here in 1895. Mr. William A. Brady, Corbett's manager, has the meet in charge, and a strong field of champions has entered. Among them are Eddie Bald, Tom Cooper, Fred Titus, Arthur Gardner, Earl Kiser and Major Taylor. The French champion, Edou-ard Taylore, who holds the world's hour record of thirty-three and a half miles, will give an exhibition mile paced by his own accemakers.

A good deal of interest is being manifested in the meetings which are being conducted in the old bicycle rink by Col. H. H. Had-ley of the Jerry McAully and the St. Barley of the Jerry McAully and the St. Bartholomew missions, New York. Col. Hadley is now connected with the church army.

the Washington, D. C., deaconess home.
The music is in charge of Prof. W. J. Kirkpatrick of Philadelphia.
"Founder" Bradley had another chance "Founder" Bradley had another chance a few days ago to exhibit his eccentricity.

The "Founder" has a great fondness for giving admonition to the people who throng his board walk and beach; so when the storm last week drove ashore a big log the shape of a butcher's block, he had it placed high on the beach, a seat put on it and a placard on which are these words: "Drift Stuff. These words are familiar to all per-sons who know anything about the Atlan-tic shore. This drift stuff comprises a litsons who know anything about the Atlantic shore. This drift stuff comprises a little of everything. This seat came ashore with other refuse. It may meet the eye of some poor fellow who has lost his place and caste and regards himself as simply drift wood. Don't be discouraged, but sit down on this log and think of what the poet Tennyson said: "That men may rise on stepping stones of their dead selves to higher things."

Tally-ho rides are the popular thing just now at this resort. They threaten to supersede trolley parties. About a dozen big tally-ho companies have been out this week, and a regular tally-ho line has been established between Allenhurst and the other resorts along the coast.

DRIVER APPOINTED. Son of the Man Who Arrested Garfield's Assassin Charles E. Kearney was today, upon the recommendation of Major Sylvester, appointed a driver in the police department, vice Wm. H. Orr, resigned. The appointment of young Kearney recalls the assassination of President Garfield by Charles J. Guiteau, for it was his father, the late Policeman Pat Kearney, who arrested Guiteau and smuggled him out of the crowd around the 6th street station to police headquarters, then located at 6th street and Pennsylvania avenue. It will also be recalled that when Officer Kearney marched into headquarters with Guiteau and informed the officer in charge that the man had shot and killed the President, it was for a few moments thought by these at headquarters that he was perthese at headquarters that he was per-petrating a joke, or had lost his mind. But when the place was a few seconds later surrounded by the excited crowd, who would have lynched the assassin had they cottained hold of him, the cleverness of the officer was duly appreciated.
